

The Bradlaugh case again received the attention of the House of Commons last week. Its member of Northampton took his seat pending the discussion of a motion declaring him ineligible on religious grounds, whereupon Sir Stafford Northcote moved that he should be expelled for disobedience of the order of the chair and contempt of the house. The motion was supported by Mr. Gladstone and adopted by a vote of 291 to 68. A new election was then ordered to issue for all the seats vacated by the members of the House of Commons. All the vacancy in the representation of Northampton, and it was stated that Mr. Bradlaugh would again contest the seat. Several members of the government voted against the expulsion.

The United Methodists are taking a liberal course in their churches. After having agitated the question for a long time they now propose to settle it by taking a vote. The ministers and elders upon the repeal of the rule prohibiting instrumental music in the churches of the United States have voted thus far, 96 were in favor of the repeal and 45 opposed it. Of the elders, 49 were in favor of the repeal and 57 opposed it. On joint action, therefore, a majority of 48 favor the repeal. In Philadelphia there were 7 votes in favor of the repeal and 18 against. Munich, therefore, is likely to carry the day.
 The question is, whether to settle the controversy by a vote, or to leave it to the power of improving the music, as it plays a very important part in public worship.

Happy Hours.

An accurate observer says: Mankind are always happier for having been happy; so that to make them happy now, you make them happy twenty years hence from the memory of it. A childhood passed with a mixture of rational indulgence, under fond and wise parents, diffuses over the whole life a feeling of calm pleasure; and in extreme old age the very last remembrance which time can erase from the mind of man. No enjoyment, however inconsiderable, is confined to the present moment. As the happier for life for having once made an agreeable tour, or having lived a year with pleasant parents, or lived a considerable interval of innocent pleasure, which contributes to render old men, as respects to the scenes before them, and carries them back to a world that is passed, and to scenes which are never to be renewed again.—Charles Dickens.

Those persons who have attained to eminence in any vocation of life have followed a uniform course, that of earnest work and unceasing application. None are truly happy but those that are busy; for the only real happiness lies in useful work of some kind, either of the hand or the head, so long as over-exertion is avoided. It should be the aim of every one to be employed. If all men were idle, the world would be a vast waste, and there would be less sorrow and suffering in the world.

(Sweet.) (H. Hudson.) There is now a substance which is both professionally and popularly endorsed and concerning which, Mr. J. B. Ferechewell, Rutledge, Oregon, writes: "I have seen the many cures effected by St. Jacobs Oil, and was persuaded to try the remedy myself. I am a sufferer from rheumatism, and experienced great pains, by leg being so swollen that I could not move it. I procured St. Jacobs Oil, used it freely and was cured."

Whenever our neighbor's house is on fire it is our duty to go to the aid of the poor little on our own. Better to be duped for two anxious apprehensions than ruined by one confident security.

His Last Days. Said a sufferer from kidney troubles, when asked to try Kidney-Wort, "I'll try it, but it will be my last dose." The man got well, and he can now recommend the remedy to all. When derangement of the stomach acts up on the kidneys and liver bringing disease and pain, Kidney-Wort is the only remedy that removes the cause and cures the disease. Liquid (very concentrated) or dry act equally efficiently.—Am. Collierist.

History can be formed from permanent monuments and records; but lives can only be written from personal knowledge, which is growing every day less, and in a short time is lost forever.

"Man must work and women weep, So runs the world away!" But they need not weep so much if they use Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription," which cures all the painful maladies peculiar to women. Sold by druggists.

The soundest argument will produce no more conviction in an empty head than the most logical declaration in a vacuum, and a guinea fall with equal velocity in a vacuum.

Lyla E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will kill staves and smother the germs of disease in fact in harmony with the laws that govern the female system. Address Mrs. Lyla E. Pinkham, 225 Western Avenue, Lynn, Mass., for circular.

It cuts one up to see the grief of old people; they have no way of working it off; and the next spring brings no new shoots out on the exhausted tree.

Now Women Learn. Women everywhere use Parker's Ginger Tonic, because they have learned by experience that it overcomes debility, indigestion, weakness in the back and kidneys, and other troubles of the sex.—Home Journal.

Rules may teach us not to raise the arm above the head; but if passion carries them it will be well done; passion knows more than art.

Dr. Pierce's Compound Extract of Sarsaparilla, cures rheumatism, breaks up colds and fevers in the blood, and cures all the eruptions, sprains, and bruises. Of all druggists.

When the nation gives birth to the child of peace, it is able to produce a great thought, another is born who is able to produce and admire it.

Faded Colors Restored. Faded gray hair gradually recovers the youthful color and luster by the use of Parker's Hair Balm, an elegant dressing, admirer of it frequently and rich perfume.

It so falls out that what we have we prize not to the worth while we enjoy it; but being lacked and lost, why then we rack the value.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate. In TORPENT OF LIVER. And extreme gastric irritability, resulting from malarial poison, has given good results.

If the religious mind growth of the world was added to the dictations of man, progress would be the result. The seeds for the future are sown in the mind of man. There is a power within that urges us to regard with wide individuality the rights of the individual, and to see the necessity of being better in the world, and the material basis to the grave as the home of the spirit. qually, he would have said, summarily with Peter when he saw the vision and heard the voice urging him to slay and eat! It is in the St. James that we get a graphic account of the "lowest" of these "regular" experiences, the seeing with the eyes of the "creature," the seeing with the eyes of the "variety of faces, which are living; and individual in character, and which appear at a distance of four or five feet as though traced in chalk on a black ground; their "general aspect being as if their substance were of pale smoke." The most remarkable thing about them to the writer is "that while they are always of a strikingly distinctive character, they are like none or I can remember to have seen in life or in pictures." Sunday schools for the dropped out as superfluous; for according to Mr. Miln, "Noting not susceptible of sensible demonstration," it is to be recognized that the microscope has not raised the "ultimate atoms" of the human soul to sight, nor the scientific scalpel drawn a tangible, dissection of the human body; he considers that the scientific teacher that they did not know, and how logical and unwise then for parents to be anxious about the morals of their children when all mental and moral distinctions are "blended in common day" and political exigencies.

It was certainly a bold stride in theology for Mr. Milin to drop out God, and the soul of man, and to make the human mind alone show as much real reverence for Biblical authority as the modern evolutionary, law-abiding divines. Those elastic exegeses make it possible to find in the Bible a "new" economic day of twenty-four hours, and a local inundation of Noah's universal flood? It is not as if Mr. Milin's "atheism" has no advantages over Rev. Mr. Milin's materialism on the score of moral influence.

"Eternal sleep" brings all characters both good and bad to a common level. "While gentians 'Babylon Universalism does really offer a bounty on sin." It is written: "The day of the Lord shall be as a thief in the night; by which day the heavens shall be rolled up, and the earth shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat." But if wickedness shortens earth life, it must, according to Universalism, give in exchange, a longer stay in heaven. "The worst sinners will be the best rewarded," says the delusion. In the end, it leaves several centuries before the righteous

It occurs to me that upon every side of nature there is evidence of design. We may look in every direction we please and we are confronted by intelligent force or power. We may not be able to comprehend its magnitude, but we can see in the smallest part of nature the power the finger marks of divine intelligence. The atheist trusts this intelligence. He has absolute faith in the order and processes of nature. What is order but persistency in a given form or method, and whence comes such persistency? Look at the

To the Editor of the Religio-Philosophical Journal:
On the evening of December 31st, 1864,

On the evening of December 31, 1964, I was walking down North Street from Genesee to Auburn, N.Y., and as I approached the first grocery my eyes happened to light upon a large and fine-looking turkey which was suspended near the door of the grocery, and I said to myself, "That's a fine turkey, that turkey for Tom Y." Being well satisfied that the voice came from no person in the neighborhood, I obeyed and purchased the turkey. I knew an old man by the name of Tom Y., who lived not far from the New York Central Station, and I had heard him say that he had heard anything of him for a long time. Turkey in hand I soon stood "rapping" at the door of his humble home. My raps soon brought to the door Mrs. Y., who was sick

"Error of opinion may be tolerated as long as truth is left free to combat it." We perceive in your last number (Feb. 4th) under the caption of "The Exchange" some remarks implying amongst other matters, the possibly superior climate of our polar region, and that philosophers can not fail to admire the ingenuity of the theories brought forward to support the idea of a hollow globe communicating with the surface of the earth. "As naturally as the waters of the ocean lead to the antipodes?"

—The question, a combination of philosophy and science, was worthy of the name, would read at the time in this last quoted sentence the utterance of a scientific man, and not of a philosopher. What! the waters turn a short corner and flow into a hole at the pole? "as naturally as the sun rises in the east and sets in the west"? Absurdity! There appears no ingenuity in this theory, only a want of correct acquaintance with the facts of nature.

It does not seem to be realized by such theoreticians, that (setting aside the climate) no one could perceive a being at or near the center of the earth, or the existence of the regions of the heavenly bodies. The force of gravity still acts, as everywhere else on the globe, and the atmosphere is everywhere present. Its intensity is slightly increased rather than diminished, owing to the surface at the pole being nearer the center than at the equator, as is proved both by theory and by experiments with the pendulum. The distance from the center of the earth to the north, it will, therefore, be a little more difficult to find a hole in the polar snow than in the equatorial snow. The latter is a more globe thin to dig into in an equatorial region. The "antipodes" question has naught to do with the hole in the globe, but with the existence of the earth.

When some ingenuous person has conceived a disciple of Newton that he can find a hole in the earth, and that he can go down it, and come up, walked around with water, or a plank on either continent wherein he can sink a rope, and come up, and walk on the other shore, chain or stairway, then we will do something else than laugh at the idea of the antipodes.

Let us reason a little a priori. The theory of the formation of the earth and other primitive globes, is by condensation from a primitive nebula. Each such condensation begins at a centre. It would be as rational to look for hollow rain drops or hollow shot, from a sheet of water, as to expect a hollow earth, from a nebula constantly aggregating attraction.

Again, physicists have succeeded by elaborate and ingenious experiments in determining the specific gravity of water, at above and half times that of water. It would be interesting to relate how a problem seemingly so difficult was accomplished; but space forbids it. The specific gravity of water is the second decision at hand, and is the average result of many experiments that varied little from each other, and in whose

The rocks and other materials composing the earth's crust, as deep as we have penetrated it, will not average more, probably than about two and one-half times the density than about two and one-half times the density of water, that is, not more than one-half the density of the average of the whole earth. This would indicate for greater solidity towards the centre instead of a hollow vacuity. We leave there two hard shelled a priori Barely an explorer who, in the human season have penetrated within five hundred miles of the pole, and therefore, not probably the first to have seen the icebergs rising from the shores of this fairy land, sailors have had their cheeks fanned by sea-breezes from the north, and the sailors of the world have discovered something besides the dim and distant fogs mist over open seas. Northern stormy from the tearing shores so near to them.

Seriously we can but believe this amelioration of the climate, the melting of the ice, the tiling with glaciers and fields of ice—within six months night out even in summer a less severe winter than in the past. The icebergs and experience ever prove that advances towards either pole implies increased rigour of the other. The icebergs are not a variable that either magnetic currents or water flowing from tropic latitudes can so completely melt. The polar icebergs are not a variable that either magnetic currents or water flowing from tropic latitudes can so completely melt. The polar icebergs are not a variable that either magnetic currents or water flowing from tropic latitudes can so completely melt.

The turkey for a New Year's dinner was duly presented, and inquiries made as to the welfare and condition of Mr. Y. She said: "I do not know where he is, or whether he is dead or alive. I am sick, and cannot go to look for him. He may possibly be in his shop. I am so distressed that I am nearly . . ."

The Brain-Work of Signalmen and Pointmen.

No one who has any practical acquaintance with the working of the human brain should fail to recognize the fatuity of a policy whereby the attention of the individual is to be directed and limbs to the integrity and precision of the mental functions performed by his brain. The brain is not a machine, and it cannot be so treated. Any student of psychology applied to the tests to the operation of his own brain for the purpose of determining the limits of his attention, whether such sustained attention is in itself requisite for the precise discharge of duties, will find that the attention of the official pointman can be reasonably expected of him only when he is not preoccupied. We have no hesitation in asserting that the attention of the official pointman placed in the signal-box at junctions where there is much traffic is monotonous. In the nature of things physical fatigue will be formed by practice, the signal-box will be formed by practice. The higher cerebral centers are, to some extent, relieved of the strain put upon them by delegating a large part of their functions to the lower cerebral centers; but even with this relief the attention is excessive, and the way in which it is relieved is in itself a source of special peril... Where the lives of hundreds of embarking passengers are at stake, the attention of the official pointman of a single train, with no better excuse than that it would cost more to replace him than to replace the engine, is not likely to be helped by thinking the greed of dividends has reached a point at which public opinion must be satisfied. The attention of the official pointman of the "railway interest" is so strongly represented in both Houses of Parliament as to be almost irresistible. It is not to be wondered at, and must, be moved to interference.
